Not illustrated. 1920 Excerpt: . earlier in the game, and for some little time New York has been on a higher parity than western markets. The shortage that existed in storage holdings has been overcome, and we are actually somewhat ahead on these goods, a condition that has not existed for some time. Considerable foreign goods are coming forward, from Denmark, Argentine, and also arrivals are expected from New Zealand. There is only a small proportion of the arrivals that standing the fact that receipts and the will grade up to extras. Notwithstanding are larger than last year, milk that formerly went into condensing channels is now largely being diverted into butter. A year ago now the market was 73Mc, about twenty cents higher than at the present time. It would not be at all surprising if the market would react, and temporarily at least, recover some of the loss....
